History of Crummer School (1984 - 2007)

As the celebration of the 50th year of the Crummer School draws to a close we want to celebrate the great strides that recent leaders have made. Since 1984, the school has received national and international recognition and is poised for further growth. We look forward to charting the future for the next 50 years.

Crummer Graduate School of Business earns AACSB accreditation.

At the time, Crummer was one of 216 accredited business schools, and one of only 16 accredited institutions that specialized in graduate education.

1987

Introduction of a new computer system in classroom

The Crummer School introduced a new computer system that allows students to individually interact with a central computer system from every desk in the classroom.

Dean Samuel Certo (1991-1993)

Five years after joining the Crummer School faculty, Samuel Certo was appointed

Dean. During his tenure as Dean he worked to increase the emphasis on technology in the classroom. He also recognized the value of an internationalized curriculum and added international internship programs, foreign language options, and established the 'Global Summit' as student learning opportunities. His international programs were the forerunners of Crummer's current international curriculum and practica.

Certo has been named the Steinmetz Professor of Management and has continued to teach at Crummer. He has been recognized for his efforts by receiving the Charles A. Welsh Memorial Award for outstanding teaching and won an innovative teaching competition sponsored by the Deans of the Southern Business Administration Association. During Crummer's recent 50th anniversary celebration, alumni voted Certo 'The Most Challenging Professor' from 1983–2006.

History of Crummer School (1984 - 2007)

Dean Edward A. Moses (1994-2000)

In 1994, Dr. Edward A. Moses was named Crummer's fourth Dean. Under Moses' leadership, the curriculum continued to expand. New opportunities for study included the Center for Enterprise Management, the Early Advantage MBA for recent college graduates with little or no work experience, and the Accelerated MBA for fast-track executives. Moses also continued to expand the "Global Business Practicum" and in 1998 launched the National Business Practicum which enabled students to work on extended projects with American companies.

In addition to expanding the curriculum, Moses oversaw the external funding and expansion of the Crummer School's facilities. In 1999, the Bush Executive Center was constructed adjacent to Crummer Hall; this facility provided the space needed for enhanced delivery of advanced business educational programs.

During Moses's tenure, the Professional MBA Program was recognized by U.S. News & World Report as one of the nation's top 25 part-time MBA programs. In addition, the school achieved a significant and long-sought milestone when Forbes magazine named Crummer as one of the Top 25 Regional Graduate Business Schools in the country.

Dr. Moses continues to teach at Crummer as the Bank of America Professor of Finance.

History of Crummer School (1984 - 2007)

Dean Craig M. McAllaster (2000-Present)

Prior to becoming Dean, Dr. Craig M. McAllaster served for six years as Assistant Dean and Director of Crummer's Professional MBA and Executive MBA programs. In July 2000, Rollins College named McAllaster the fifth Dean of Crummer School.

Under Dean McAllaster's leadership, the Crummer School established the Center for Management and Executive Education in 2001. Two years later, the Center for Entrepreneurship and the Center for Leadership Development were launched. In response to the market demand, the program offerings were expanded to include the Saturday MBA program in 2005.

The Crummer School continues to receive national recognition during Dean McAllaster's tenure. In 2001, Forbes magazine ranked Crummer the 12th Best Regional Business School in the United States and Beta Gamma Sigma recognized the school as a premier chapter of the honorary business fraternity. The Crummer School was recognized by Forbes again in both 2003 and 2005. In Forbes most recent rankings based on return on investment, the Crummer School ranked 37th nationally out of 480 AACSB accredited schools and 20th among private universities. The Crummer School remains the number one MBA program in Florida.

Dean's Message

Rollins MBA ranked
#37 in the nation
and #1 in Florida by Forbes magazine

The rating is a positive reminder that our determination to offer outstanding faculty, small class sizes, and a solid commitment to teaching, is respected at a national level, and is valued by employers.

By now I hope that you have heard the news that has all of us so excited. Forbes magazine ranks the Crummer Graduate School of Business at number 37 in the country and as the only Florida school in the top 50! Their evaluation is based on an analysis of the return on the investment that MBA graduates see from their education five years after receiving their degree. Many consider this the most quantitative of all the rankings. The rating is a positive reminder that our determination to offer outstanding faculty, small class sizes, and a solid commitment to teaching, is respected at a national level, and is valued by employers. However, this is simply an acknowledgement of that which has been known to each of you – the individuals and businesses listed in these pages. The successes we have achieved and the quality of the Crummer School education would not be possible without your vision and support.

This past year – the 50th anniversary of the Crummer School – over 600 alumni, friends, and businesses donated to the school. They did this because of their belief in our faculty, students, and our mission of preparing students to become outstanding managers and leaders in businesses and communities. They are investing in the value of their own degrees.

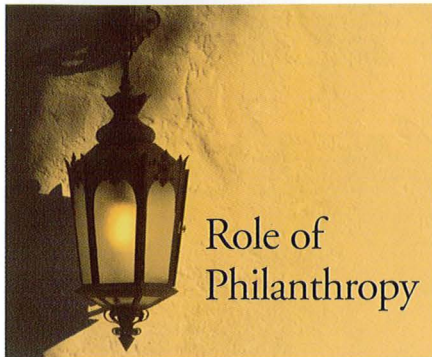

The faculty, staff, and students are united in their determination and sense of responsibility to continue to move forward, change, and succeed in new and exciting ways. Programs are being revised, ideas are being developed, and all of it will lead to more growth and added prominence.

We benefit greatly when individuals, corporations, and foundations commit their trust to the Crummer School. Often words of gratitude can seem overused and are in danger of losing their value, and yet the simplest words remain the most powerful. So, please accept my deepest gratitude on behalf of the faculty, students, and staff. Your contributions are reminders that the work done in these halls, has an impact far beyond the classroom.

Sincerely yours,

Dean Craig M. McAllaster

Honor Roll

Corporate Philanthropy

The strength and reputation of a business school is, in large part, a reflection of the relationships it maintains with leading corporations. Since its founding, the Crummer School has forged numerous intellectual and educational partnerships with corporations and foundations. In turn, they have invested substantially in the school. Companies and foundations have benefited from student consulting projects, student internships, faculty resources, and MBA graduates as employees.

We extend our sincere appreciation to those corporations and foundations which made a contribution to the Crummer School during the past year.

Rollins MBA at Crummer School Ranked 37th Nationally by Forbes Magazine

The MBA program at the Rollins College Crummer Graduate School of Business was ranked number 37 nationally (20th nationally among private universities) for return on investment by Forbes magazine. The Crummer School moved up 10 slots in this biennial ranking and remains number one in Florida. This marks the third consecutive time the Crummer School was recognized by Forbes.

“We are extremely pleased with our performance and to be ranked along side some of the best schools in the country such as Dartmouth, Stanford and Harvard,” said Dean Craig McAllaster. “Once again, Forbes magazine has confirmed what our faculty, students, alumni and corporate recruiters already know, that the Crummer School at Rollins College prepares MBA students to be managers and leaders in a way that provides our stakeholders with real value and a world-class business education of distinction.”

The Forbes study was published in the September 3 issue of the magazine. “Based on return on investment, this ranking provides an unbiased evaluation of the economic value of a Crummer School degree,” said McAllaster. Unlike other surveys, Forbes conducted a comprehensive ranking of business schools that compared the cost of attaining an MBA to the monetary rewards for obtaining the degree. In computing the rankings, Forbes calculated that a Rollins full-time MBA degree, through increased earning potential, pays for itself in slightly more than three years and provides as much as a 72 percent return on investment.
