These stories—my great metamorphic gang: the postponement of their ever ending an attempt to conceal faultlines—the spaces where we take leave of each other. As if —ologies and —isations would save us, I submitted to your analysis allowed you to run the scalpel along my diction, begin to grasp the land of between us, to search uneasily for border towns.