1995-96 HONOR ROLL OF DONORS

CHANGING SEASONS

This Honor Roll issue of the Rollins Alumni Record pays tribute to the thousands of loyal alumni and friends who gave to the College in 1995-96, and provides a nostalgic look back at student life on campus through the years.

Throughout its 111-year history, Rollins College has undergone many changes and refinements. This magazine is being distributed as Rollins is about to undergo many new and exciting changes in its evolution. The campus will see unprecedented growth in new and expanded facilities, beginning with construction of the Cornell Campus Center early next year. The Rollins community is also considering change as it redefines its curriculum to address more adequately some of the challenges that await us in the new millennium. And lastly, Rollins prepares for change as it announces the public phase of a comprehensive campaign to raise funds for scholarships and endowed faculty positions, ensuring that the College will remain positioned to provide educational excellence in a new century.

Dear Rollins Donors:

Once again, your gifts have set a record for contributions to Rollins, helping to ensure that the College remains a national leader among private liberal arts institutions. Alumni, friends, parents, corporations, and foundations contributed a total of $9.4 million during the 1995-96 fiscal year, which represents a remarkable 70-percent increase over the previous year.

Annual giving to the College is the foundation of our development program, and I am pleased to report that contributions to The Rollins Fund reached an all-time high of $1.826 million in 1995-96. The success of our annual giving program is a reflection of the dedication of our volunteers, and I want to say "thank you" to each of you for your important work on behalf of the College.

We could not have achieved such heights without our Rollins Fund National Chair, Jack Myers III '69 '70. Jack served as chair for an unprecedented three years, and his vision and commitment are evidenced by the fact that annual unrestricted support for the College increased each year of his leadership. I also want to express my gratitude to Tom and Ruthy Lawrence duPont '70, '70, who chaired the Parents Committee, and to John Puerner, president, publisher, and CEO of The Orlando Sentinel, who led the corporate effort. Both the parents and corporate campaigns were enormously successful.

Because of our strong tradition of annual giving and the measure of stability these unrestricted funds provide the College, we have been able to raise our fund-raising sights and move into an exciting new phase. In October we will announce a campaign to strengthen Rollins' base of resources for the twenty-first century through gifts to support scholarships, endowed faculty chairs, innovative academic initiatives, student-life programs, technology, and the campus's physical facilities.

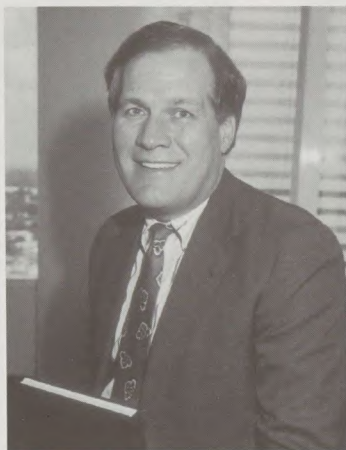

We are grateful to all of you who contributed to our success during 1995-96. We rely on each and every gift to maintain the rich tradition of excellence our students enjoy and deserve.

Because of your support, we can move into the future with pride and confidence.

Sincerely,

Rita Bornstein, Ph.D.
President

A Word From Jack Myers III '69 '70 National Chair of The Rollins Fund

It is hard to believe that three years have flown by so quickly and that my time as Rollins Fund National Chair has drawn to a close. My role as national chair has been one of the most rewarding of my life, reinforcing what I know to be true of Rollins and its alumni, parents, and friends.

Thanks to our loyal volunteers and generous donors, Rollins surpassed its annual giving goal of $1.825 million for the 1995-96 fiscal year and broke the record yet again for unrestricted support of the College.

Three years ago, alumni giving achieved a major milestone when it reached the $1 million mark. Happily, we can be proud that alumni continued the trend the following two years, with alumni participation in The Rollins Fund also increasing. We are still working toward a participation rate of at least 30 percent, but I am very pleased that we reached the 25 percent level this past year.

I want to especially thank John Puerner for his leadership in securing corporate contributions for The Rollins Fund and Tom '70 and Ruthy Lawrence duPont '70 for co-chairing the Parents Committee. Both constituencies had committees of outstanding volunteers who helped make The Rollins Fund corporate and parent campaigns among the most successful ever.

In the challenging months ahead, maintaining a strong base of annual support will be even more critical to the College's ability to meet its operating expenses and continue its tradition of providing the best in a liberal arts education. Fortunately, two strong leaders will be taking the helm of The Rollins Fund in the coming year—Frank '52 and Daryl Stamm Barker '53. We could not have found a more winning team to head up this important position. Daryl is an active member of the alumni board, and Frank was recently elected to the board of trustees.

Once again, thank you for giving me the opportunity to serve you and the College as Rollins Fund National Chair. Rollins is truly remarkable, and this experience has made it even more so for me.

REUNION GIVING

Alumni from the reunion classes came through for The Rollins Fund in record numbers this year. Indeed, the most exciting feature of reunion class giving is the increase in participation, which jumped from 26 percent in 1994-95 to 29 percent for the 1995-96 fiscal year.

The Class of 1951, celebrating its 45th Reunion, wins the Class Participation Award for its participation rate of 49 percent. Special thanks go to Rollins Fund volunteers Margy Mountcastle Cossaboom, Bill Gordon, Bud Johnson, Ed Motch, Francis Natolis, Charlie Robinson, Ann Groves Ross, Ann Turley Warinner and Scotty Witherall for their successful efforts.

The 50th Reunion class, which won the Class Participation Award last year, comes in a close second at 46 percent. Remarkably, in addition to the Classes of 1951 and 1946, three other reunion classes reached participation rates of at least 40 percent—1941, 1961, and 1966.

Receiving the Class Gift Award is the Class of 1961 which, under the volunteer leadership of Jim Levy, J. Jay Mautner, and Sue Scribner, gave a total of $48,861.

The Young Alumni Class Award goes to the 15th Reunion class, the Class of 1981, which has both the largest class gift and the highest participation rate of the three youngest reunion classes. Craig Crimmings, Cheryl Willey Finnegan, and Gerald Ladner deserve special credit for leading their class to victory.

Reunion gives alumni the opportunity to reflect on all that Rollins has meant to them over the years. For many, it is a time to give something back to their alma mater.

Thanks to all of you who participated in making your reunion special.

"IT'S PAY-BACK TIME" ANGUS BARLOW '69 MBA

Ambition is what propelled Angus Barlow to the Roy E. Crummer Graduate School of Business. A sense of community is what keeps him connected to the school.

For six years in a row, Barlow has supported the Mary and Angus Barlow Scholarship for exceptional Crummer students. One outstanding student each year from either the Accelerated MBA or Early Advantage MBA programs is selected to receive the $8,000 award named for him and his wife. Candidates are chosen based on their superior undergraduate records, work experience, interview with Crummer administration, and positions of leadership.

Barlow, who retired from the accounting firm of Ernst and Young in 1975, said he has remained committed to the scholarship award because he wants to return something to the College. "You have to pay back," said Barlow. "It's pay-back time."

He first became associated with Rollins in the 1940s when he audited the College through his accounting firm at the time. Later, he decided to take advantage of the MBA program at Crummer.

Barlow had high accolades for his post-graduate education. "The program is first-rate. When you say you have an MBA from Rollins, people take notice."

Barlow said his lengthy association with the College is rooted in his deep admiration for the institution.

"I've had a long relationship with Rollins," he said. "It's such a great school. It has a unique approach to teaching and, from [former] President Hamilton Holt, the atmosphere is still here. It's a great, great organization."—KDH

CHANGING SEASONS

BENEFACTOR GIVES GIFT OF EDUCATION

BARBARA CHASE

Barbara Chase did not attend Rollins, but she's seeing to it that other people get the opportunity. For the past several years, Chase has funded a scholarship for undergraduate students. "I've always been interested in scholarship programs," she said.

Lucky for Jennifer Harris '96. Harris benefited from the Chase scholarship throughout her four years at Rollins. She met Chase during her freshman year in 1993 and has continued to see her regularly.

"Without her scholarship, I wouldn't have been able to go to Rollins," said Harris. "It really meant a lot that she wanted to know who I was and that she'd take the time to meet with me and tell me about her life."

In gratitude, Harris invited Chase to her commencement ceremony in May. "She'd never been to a Rollins graduation. She was really excited."

Chase said she was equally glad to get the chance to meet Harris. "I think it's very nice to know who the scholarship recipient is. You get to see where your money is going."

Harris, who is now working as an assistant to the president of an Orlando real estate firm, wants to stay in touch with her benefactor. "She made a difference in my life."—KDH

WARREN A. WEGNER
 SCHOLAR

ZACHARY E.
 CLOUGH '99

For Zachary Clough, a member of the Rollins Outdoor Club, the opportunity to apply what he is learning in class to his zest for the outdoors is what makes Rollins special. This past year, for example, a course in restoration ecology led him to explore a number of sites throughout the state where important restoration projects were taking place.

"Top notch" is how Clough describes the overall educational experience at Rollins. He is especially impressed with his professors. "You can speak your mind and not be afraid. I am using my brain to really learn and explore." He also cites the myriad hands-on learning opportunities that make it more fun to learn.

During the summer, Clough volunteered at Blue Spring State Park in Orange City, Florida. He aspires to an outdoor career, perhaps as a photographer, that will take him to distant points across the globe.—BA

MARISA B. ALEXANDER '99

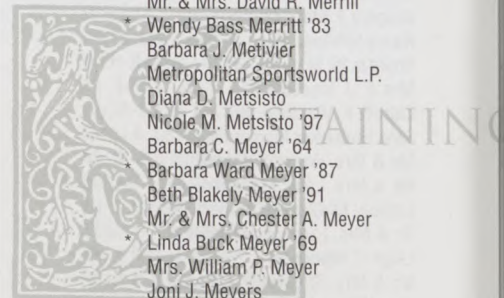

While Marisa Alexander definitely enjoys the "bonus" of being outside in the middle of winter, what really attracted her to Rollins was the thought of receiving a personalized education where she would not get lost in the crowd.

Alexander looks forward to her small classes. "Learning to work in small groups, where what you have to say means something, is a very important life skill," she said.

Her love of books led her to enroll this past year in a course titled "Women Authors," a literature class that sparked and deepened her interest because the teacher, she said, loved the topic.

Alexander's major is politics, with an emphasis on international studies. Currently, she works with international clientele in Walt Disney World's guest services division. She hopes to one day teach politics at a college such as Rollins, where she has found an abundance of unique learning opportunities and where, she said, "students are willing to help one another."—BA

MICHELLE ALVAREZ '99

Michelle Alvarez found a home away from home almost immediately upon her move to the Rollins campus. Alvarez feels that Rollins' greatest advantage is its size.

"I like the size of the student body because it is so easy to get a group together to do something. The first week of school I felt so comfortable—not homesick at all—because I made friends right away."

Alvarez also attributes her easy adjustment to her professors. "You can call professors at home. They are sensitive to real-life problems, and they make it possible for you to participate in class."

A class in international politics helped her realize that all nations of the world are interrelated, and she hopes to use one of her winter terms to study abroad. "You can't stop learning about the world because the world advances, and you have to also."

Alvarez is on the Rollins swim team and works at the YMCA teaching children. She is enrolled in the "three-two" program with the Roy E. Crummer Graduate School of Business and hopes to eventually travel widely and perhaps work as a financial adviser overseas.—BA

YOUNG ALUM SHARES ROLLINS EXPERIENCE

LAURA DECKER '88

Laura Decker left Rollins in 1988 for the tropical paradise of the Florida Keys, but she still remains close to the College. She has been a loyal supporter of Rollins since graduation.

Giving is not only Decker's way of showing her appreciation to the College, it's her way of seeing that future Rollins students share the same opportunities she was afforded. "It's kind of a thank you for everything they gave to me," she said. "I know that the money donated goes to help students to have the same quality experience as I did."

Decker said her experience at Rollins helped shaped her present career as a sales and marketing representative for Ocean Reef Club, a 4,000-acre resort on Key Largo.

"The four years I spent at Rollins helped me learn about myself and helped me feel comfortable about what I could offer in the job market. I was surrounded by quality people, from teachers to students. There were no troublemakers. It gave me a strong feeling of security."

Decker, who married two years ago and is expecting her first child in October, is the second generation in her family to attend Rollins. She followed her mother, Sandra Baker Sherman '62, to the College. Decker earned a degree in sociology and was a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority while at the College.

"Florida was the right choice for me," said the former Minnesota resident. "I came down and never left."—KDH

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR SINGLE WOMEN GET BOOST FROM HOLT SUPPORTER

BEN MOSS

In the cheering section for adult higher education, few are more committed to the cause than Winter Park businessman Ben B. Moss, owner and president of Florida Brace Corp. Just ask the 45 beneficiaries of his generosity, most of them single women and mothers, who have gone on to complete their college educations on scholarships he has provided through the Hamilton Holt School evening degree program.

Not one to talk much about the support he has provided, Moss nevertheless concedes he simply saw a need. "In the course of a lifetime as an employer, I have seen women stuck where they can't advance any on the job," he said. "So this is an effort to help those people. So many get stuck in jobs. They're capable of more. All they need is an education."

Moss learned to appreciate the benefits of a an education from his mother, who taught elementary school for more than 50 years. Born in South Carolina, he grew up in Haines City, Fla. A University of Florida law graduate, he moved to the Orlando area in 1947 and practiced there for about nine years before going into business, later to head Florida Brace, makers of spinal braces and cervical collars.

Throughout his career, however, he has maintained his support of higher education. Says Holt School Dean Bob Smither of Moss, "He is someone who really cares about students."—AWM

CHANGING SEASONS

A "LIFETIME FRIENDSHIP" WITH ROLLINS

PAUL '68 AND CHRIS KELLY VARTANIAN '68

The Vartanian family of New Jersey is making Rollins a family affair. Paul and Christabel Kelly Vartanian are 1968 graduates of the College and longtime supporters, and their children are following in their footsteps. Son Nishan is a member of the Class of 1998, while daughter Annabel is part of the incoming freshman Class of 2000.

"Rollins is being appreciated throughout the country," said Christabel Vartanian, now chief of protocol for the governor of New Jersey, Christine Todd Whitman. "We're hearing nice things about it—that it combines students from different parts of the country in a fabulous setting."

Those assets attracted both Christabel and Paul, who was a biology and economics major. As the third generation to operate his family's business, Paul now presides over Vartanian & Sons, a New York City wholesale diamond and precious stones firm.

The Vartanians are strong backers of liberal arts colleges. "We feel strongly that a liberal arts education allows you to explore options before you make a choice about a lifetime career," Christabel said. "We both felt we got an excellent education at Rollins. It prepared us to do myriad things in our lives."

While their children attend Rollins, the senior Vartanians will be serving on the Parents Committee. "At Rollins," Christabel said, "we made a lifetime friendship."—AWM

At Rollins:

A MEATY ISSUE

Dining at Rollins has evolved over the past 111 years from dress codes and table service to chicken fajitas and fat gram labels. Where once all students were expected to eat at the same time, now hours are extended well into the evening to accommodate the erratic eating schedules of many individuals. One constant has remained, however: few things are of greater concern to students than the quality of the food service, and nothing is ever quite satisfactory.

When Rollins first opened in 1885, meals were prepared in a small lean-to kitchen attached to the south end of Pinehurst. Students were served in two bedrooms on the first floor of the building. Day students were required to bring their own meals.

The first dining hall opened in 1886 with a $4,000 donation from College benefactor Francis Bangs Knowles. Nicknamed the Beanery, the small, one-story structure was located on the current site of Chase Hall. Marion Foss Coombs Ballard, a student at the time, gave this review of the quality of the cuisine in a letter obtained by Rollins Archives: "Our cook, of Swedish origin, didn't excel in the culinary line, but it was food." This refrain would recur regularly during the next century.

Dining rules of tradition abounded during the early days at Beans. Rollins students were required to dress up for dinner well into the 1960s. In 1890, demerits were given to students for being tardy to meals. Minutes of a 1900 faculty meeting stated that residential cottage monitors were to be kept informed of the table manners of those in their charge. Students were also forbidden from loitering on the dining hall steps.

In 1918, ten years after the Beanery was moved to the rear of Pinehurst to make room for Chase Hall, it was destroyed by fire. Dining facilities were moved temporarily to the Lyman gym. A second cafeteria, formally known as the Commons but still referred to by the students as Beans, was built in 1919. The new building was used through the 1957-58 academic year before being turned into facilities for the art department.

During its 39-year history, the Commons weathered the food shortages of World War II and student uprisings over food quality and service. In 1931, the College held a campuswide contest to get ideas on improving the Commons. A couple of suggestions: have fresh flowers on the tables and establish assigned seating to "prevent a stampede when the doors open."

In 1932, students circulated a petition crying foul over a number of issues including being rushed through their meals by student waiters, unclean silverware, sour milk, too much/little meat, too many/few vegetables, and an excess of starchy food. A typical meal at the time was oyster stew, creamed celery, canned beets, salad, and dessert. Curiously, some students complained there was not enough food.

Administrators took the problem seriously and followed up on the complaints, asking students for more input. Some of the comments: "I signed the petition without reading it; Everything is okay." "No improvement. I want better food and more of it." "Milk is much better." Next to the latter comment an administrator wrote, "Note: It is the same milk."

In 1933, lunch consisted of fruit cocktail, meat and bacon patties with mushroom sauce, broccoli with Hollandaise sauce, shrimp and egg salad, and apple tapioca. A standard dinner was red snapper or baked ham, mashed potatoes, cinnamon rolls, and butterscotch pecan pie. Nevertheless, students at the time complained that faculty members were served better food. They also criticized food presentation, saying it was "unappetizing."

In 1934, administrators got tough in enforcing the dress code. According to staff memorandums, boys who flagrantly neglected to wear neckties to dinner could be refused entrance. It was noted that some of the boys were "disagreeable" about the dress code. One had the audacity to come to dinner directly from repairing his car "with grease, oil, and mud all over him."

President Hamilton Holt was keen on instilling dignity to the Commons. He insisted that meals be served in courses and candles be lighted for dinner. Linen napkins were used on Sundays. Meals were served by student waiters who apparently didn't care for dawdlers. A student at the time noted that waiters were mainly football players or music students. "They were either tough or temperamental, so it didn't pay to delay your eating."

In 1945, when war rationing limited food supplies, students again circulated a petition, this time targeting the manager of the Commons, Martha McFarlane. "She stands (scowling most of the time) behind the serving counter policing the food like a sentinel," wrote one student. "It seems that Miss McFarlane's discourtesy is at its maximum when some of us timidly ask for a second helping." Other students complained that McFarlane shoved food at them and deliberately overflowed their glasses when they asked for more milk. President Holt pleaded for peace and described the "food crisis" as being the product of wartime tension and food and labor shortages.

Rose Skillman Hall was built in 1958 with a donation from the building's namesake. Overlooking Lake Virginia, the building initially seated 520.

In the early 1960s, food waste was the concern of the day. The Beanery Committee noted in 1961 that 200 complete meals were thrown out every week and 20 gallons of milk were poured down the drain. Students were encouraged to take one food item at a time and go back through the line again for more, only if necessary. The committee's motto: "Remember: less waste—more steaks!"

Today's Rollins students encounter a much less formal dining atmosphere. Wearing clothing of some sort is about the only requirement. Although they don't get table service, students do have a wide range of menu selections provided by Marriott Food Service. There is, for example, a deli station and grill with made-to-order hot and cold sandwiches, generous salad/dessert bar, and a smorgasbord of hot foods to rival Morrison's. Another sign of the changing times are the little notes posted all over Beans detailing the nutritional content of everything from salad dressing to cookies.

In 1991, an arson fire heavily damaged the kitchen area of Beans. Students were served food on paper plates and had to eat with plastic forks. A sign of the politically correct times: students complained over the use of non-recyclable materials.

The average students today may be sporting a few more tattoos than those of yesteryear, but complaining about food has remained a constant throughout the generations. In letters to the editor in a 1994 edition of the Sandspur, students griped about finding worms, roaches, and weevils in the food. "At times we don't know if we're at the cafeteria or the zoo," bemoaned one group of students. "We don't know about everyone else, but we prefer our animals dead. In fact, kill the veggies too. Let's not take any chances."

Despite the growth of the College, personal touches are still very much in evidence. Popular food service worker Evelyn Nicolosi, a fixture at Beans since 1978, is a prime example. While ringing up student and employee lunches she always takes time to give a friendly greeting: "That's a nice little sandwich—you can get napkins right over there." "You've been looking a little thin; are you getting enough to eat?" "How's your brother? Did he come visit you this weekend?"

It's said she knows the names of just about every student and vividly remembers those from years past. Though she is quite gregarious on the job, Evelyn shies away from the spotlight. "Oh, I don't want to be interviewed," she protested when asked to comment for this article. "Just tell (alumni) Evelyn is still here, and she misses them."

Remember: less waste—
more steaks

Beans is now on the verge of undergoing its most radical change yet. In February 1997, construction will begin on the Cornell Campus Center, which will serve as the core of campus activities, including meal service. Rose Skillman Hall will be merged with the Mills Memorial Center to create the new facility.

Food service at the campus center will resemble a mall food court with separate kiosks replacing the traditional cafeteria-style service of years past. The new arrangement follows a trend on college campuses across the country.

The atmosphere and look of the Rollins cafeteria will undoubtedly continue to evolve well into the next century. But students of the future are sure to continue echoing the thoughts and concerns of their forebears regardless of the situation: We want better food and more of it!

Rollins juniors Christopher Shields and Michele Esfahani give cashier Evelyn Nicolosi an early morning hug as they pass through her checkout line at Beans. In 1992, "Miss Evelyn" was presented the Sister Kathleen Gibney Humanitarian Award for her "countless hours of devoted service and guidance to the students, faculty, and staff at Rollins."

'STAYING INVOLVED' AN OUTLET FOR YOUNG GRADUATE

ERIC MARSHALL '91

Five years out of college, Eric Marshall says he feels about as connected now to his alma mater as he was when he attended Rollins. Certainly, he says, he wants to stay involved.

That's saying a lot for someone who spent the summer waist deep in obligations overseeing satellite venues as a ticket manager for the Olympic Games, handling regional soccer tickets for Sanford Stadium in Athens, Ga. and the University of Georgia Coliseum.

As a former ticket manager for the Citrus Bowl in Orlando, Marshall found he was right in his element working for the Olympics. While at Rollins, he immersed himself in the world of sports, working with former NBC correspondent Gordon Frazier broadcasting baseball and basketball on campus and getting involved in athletics.

"That was a tremendous experience at Rollins," said Marshall, a history major who came to Rollins from his home just outside Philadelphia. "Every other school was such a big school. But I received so much support at Rollins."

"There's such a great opportunity in college," he said, recalling Winter Term experiences and four years of dorm life. "I still have a lot of friends at Rollins, and I'd like to stay involved. I'd love to see students have the same type of experience that I did."—AWM

McFeely-Rogers Foundation donates $250,000 to Rollins music department

The Rollins music department has received a major boost, thanks to a $250,000 grant provided by the McFeely-Rogers Foundation.

Earnings of the generous endowment will be used to support sorely needed student scholarships and an artist-in-residence program at the Virginia S. and W.W. Nelson Department of Music. The College currently offers about $70,000 annually in music scholarships as compared to Stetson, which offers around $510,000. The additional scholarship funds will enable Rollins to attract the caliber of students that the College would be proud to have as music graduates.

The Rogers Artist-in-Residence Program would arrange for well-qualified instructors/performers to spend anywhere from six weeks to a semester at the College, expanding the instructional opportunities for students beyond the present faculty. The artist-in-residence would have direct contact with students through performances, lectures, individual lessons, and critiques of student performances. Rollins could reap other benefits through connections with secondary school programs—such as presentations at local schools and/or critiques of high school student performances—which would help attract students of ability and promise to the College.

Fred Rogers '51, of Mister Rogers' Neighborhood fame, is the president of the family-run McFeely-Rogers Foundation, a generous supporter of Rollins which has donated annually to The Rollins Fund. Other family members involved in the foundation include Rogers' sister Nancy Rogers Crozier, her son Daniel Crozier Jr., who teaches music at Rollins, and Rogers' sons, James and John.

Rogers studied music composition at Rollins, graduating magna cum laude. His wife, Joanne Byrd Rogers, a 1950 Rollins graduate and current trustee of the College, is a concert pianist who performs extensively as part of a piano duo with Jeannine Romer Morrison, also a 1951 graduate. The duo performed at the College during the March 1996 alumni reunion weekend.

Music has been a part of Rollins' curriculum since its founding in 1885. Students are provided with a personalized musical education in performance, historical literature, and theory. The Department of Music features a state-of-the-art music laboratory and classroom and a multipurpose rehearsal and recital facility, which is in constant demand.

Endowment will support student scholarships and artist-in-residence program.

"In the old days, students and professors could just walk right into the Rogers Room, sit down, and play," said Dr. John Sinclair, chair of the music department. "But today, with our department literally bursting at the seams, the Rogers Room is reserved every day, hour by hour."

Since 1990, when Sinclair assumed the department's chairmanship, the number of music majors has grown from eight in 1990-91 to 41 in 1995-96. The Hamilton Holt School evening degree program added a music major to its curriculum in November 1995. There are now 22 Holt School students majoring in music.

Each Rollins music major is trained in the skills and knowledge necessary to support graduate study in music or in any number of nonmusical professions. Students often choose to double-major in music and a complementary field. Students minoring in music are presented with the same opportunities as the majors. All courses, ensembles, and applied music lessons are available to students who wish to concentrate in another field but still desire music in their lives.—KDH

Music Department Chair John Sinclair conducts a music class.

YOUNG ALUMNI: CLASSES OF 1986-1995 BUILDING ON TRADITION

The momentum of young alumni participation in The Rollins Fund has been building during the past few years, indicating that their ties to Rollins are still strong.

This past year, alumni from the classes of 1986-1995 surpassed their goal of $32,000 by 18 percent to raise an unprecedented $37,907 for The Rollins Fund. This amount is more than $7,500 over the amount raised by young alumni during the previous fiscal year and is twice the amount contributed by these classes in 1991-92!

One of the most significant characteristics of young alumni are their sheer numbers. More than one-third of Rollins alumni graduated during the past 10 years and, as a result, individual gifts made by young alumni, no matter what the size, can add up to tens of thousands of dollars, as this year's results prove.

ROLLINS SENDS GRAD DOWN SCENIC CAREER PATH

DON ROBINS '69

Don Robins took the scenic route on his journey to become a CPA and partner for the prestigious accounting firm of Ernst and Young LLP.

After obtaining a bachelor's degree in chemistry at Rollins, he taught math at a Miami junior high school. Drawing on his Rollins experience as a photographer for both the Sandspur and Tomokan, Robins also worked part time for the now-defunct Miami News.

He completed a second major in accounting at the University of Miami in 1974 and sat for the CPA exam. After joining a "Big 8" accounting firm and working as an auditor in Miami for two years, Robins moved to Paris, where he prepared tax returns for Americans working abroad. "I loved it; it was great," he said of his three years stationed in Paris. "They had to pry me out with a crow bar."

In 1979 he was transferred back from Paris to Miami, where he continued to prepare tax returns for U.S. expatriates living in South America. After five years, Robins transferred to Houston. Robins joined Ernst and Young in 1985 and was promoted to partner in 1988. He currently is responsible for a staff that prepares tax returns for more than 50 Houston-based companies that employ U.S. expatriates around the world and foreign nationals in the U.S.

Robins said his experience at Rollins inadvertently steered him toward a career in international business. "Rollins was a really good place to grow up," he said. "It exposed me to a lot of people from different cultures and socioeconomic backgrounds. From that experience, I always wanted to get a job overseas." He has stayed in touch with his alma mater through consistent generous donations.—KDH

SUPPORTING ATHLETICS TOGETHER

DICK '57 AND LAMAR HARPER WILLIAMS '56

Among the many couples who have met at Rollins and married over the years, Dick and Lamar Harper Williams have a special interest in supporting student athletic scholarships for future generations. They both love athletics and appreciate the tradition it has played on the College's campus.

Dick, a 1957 alumnus, played baseball for former Rollins athletic director and alumnus Joe Justice '40. "Joe and baseball. That's where my love lies for the school," said Dick, a Central Florida residential builder-developer and former Seminole County Commissioner.

Williams, a graduate of Winter Park High, earned his undergraduate degree from Rollins and master's from the University of Florida. He taught history and coached high school football and track in Central Florida before going into business as head of Dick Williams Homes, Longwood. He has served as a Rollins class agent and a member of the Rollins Sports Hall of Fame Committee.

Lamar Williams entered Rollins as Lamar Harper Wrisley, graduating in 1956 with a degree in human relations. Now retired, she was for many years a successful broker with Coldwell Banker. In 1979, she and her brother, Philip S. Harper, Jr., established the Carrie A. Lamar Harper Scholarship, designated for a female athlete, in memory of their mother, who attended Rollins.—AWM

REMEMBERING ROLLINS

The College gratefully acknowledges the thoughtful generosity of the following alumni and other friends who have included Rollins in their estate plans. Some have made unrestricted gifts, while others have designated their legacies for purposes of special interest to them, such as the George and Harriet Cornell Fine Arts Center. All are deeply appreciated. In 1995-96, Rollins received almost $2,000,000 in estate distributions, over $500,000 in life income gifts and a life insurance policy.

Eugene D. Coleman '34 $5,000

Mr. Coleman was a lifelong donor to The Rollins Fund and perpetuated his interest in his alma mater by remembering the College in his will. His bequest will establish an unrestricted endowment fund. A talented artist, he was active in college and community affairs.

Jessie E. Drey $1,500,000

This first distribution from Mrs. Drey's estate is designated for the College's endowment. The income it earns will be directed to the George and Harriet Cornell Fine Arts Museum. A former member of the Cornell Board of Visitors, Mrs. Drey continued to be a devoted supporter of the Museum. In addition, a gift annuity established by Mrs. Drey many years ago has been released for the general purposes of the College. Additional funds from this bequest are expected.

Allison Gade $10,000

As Winter Park residents, Mrs. Gade and her husband had a long-standing interest in Rollins. Her unrestricted legacy will be used where the need is greatest to maintain the excellence of the College's educational program.

Franklin Gamwell $5,000

Mr. Gamwell, who appreciated the educational and cultural resources Rollins offers to the Winter Park community, provided this unrestricted bequest to be paid to the College after the death of his wife. He made a further provision for Rollins to be realized after the deaths of other family members.

Ruth Ward Gurtler '29 $17,719

After graduating from Rollins cum laude, Mrs. Gurtler received her nurse's training at Johns Hopkins Hospital. She made her estate provision for the College through a gift annuity from which she received a generous quarterly income during her lifetime.

Webber B. Haines '26 $25,000

Mr. Haines was a partner of the Winter Park law firm of Winderweede, Haines, Ward & Woodman for many years. His unrestricted legacy will be added to the College's endowment where it will help to assure the continuing excellence of Rollins.

Sara Harbottle Howden '35 $99,372

A former dean of women and member of the Rollins administration, Mrs. Howden was a devoted alumna all her life. When she moved to a retirement community, she gave her condominium to the College, which sold it and invested the proceeds in a charitable remainder trust to pay her income for the rest of her life. Mrs. Howden avoided paying capital gains tax she would have incurred had she sold the property herself and obtained a substantial income tax deduction at the time of the gift.

Mattie M. Kelly '50 $113,443

Mrs. Kelly's bequest will establish the Mattie M. Kelly Musical Educational Fund at Rollins, the income from which will provide scholarships for talented students. This endowment is a reflection of her interest in the arts and will permanently link her name with that of her alma mater.

Ralph and Alice Kingsley $50,000

After the death of Mrs. Kingsley, Rollins received a generous unrestricted legacy from her estate and that of her husband. It will be added to the College's endowment with the income being used where most needed.

E. Hayne Sayne Shumate $54,703

Mr. Shumate was the husband of Margaret (Betty) Myers Shumate '38. He stipulated that Mrs. Shumate was to be paid income from various trusts he established for the rest of her life and after her death Rollins and other beneficiaries were to receive the principal. His generous bequest will establish the Shumate Fund, an unrestricted endowment.

Barbara A. Spencer '54 $26,394

Miss Spencer's unrestricted bequest will be added to the endowment of the College, where it will help to assure its future strength. Having been a teacher for many years, Miss Spencer realized the importance of education and helped to fund a scholarship program through the Westbrook Foundation in Connecticut.

Charlotte M. Stienhans '30 $714

Miss Stienhans was trained as an elementary school teacher at Rollins and Columbia University and was director of elementary education for the State of Florida for the the last eight years of her career. This final distribution from her estate will be added to the generous endowment established by her bequest.

William Webb, Jr. '39 $10,570

This first distribution from Mr. Webb's estate has been added to the scholarship fund he established during his lifetime to assist talented students in the College's Theatre Department. Mr. Webb regularly attended performances at the Annie Russell Theatre and also directed that his shares in the College's Pooled Income Fund be added to the Webb Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Rebecca Coleman Wilson '34 $5,000

Mrs. Wilson's unrestricted bequest culminates a lifetime of financial support and volunteer service to her alma mater. Mrs. Wilson was a Rollins trustee from 1951-1969 and President of the College's Alumni Association in 1956-57. Since she attached no strings to her legacy, it will be used where the need is greatest.

JUNIOR AWARDED GOLDWATER SCHOLARSHIP

ZAIBA MALIK '97

Zaiba Malik brought home the gold in April—a prestigious Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship, that is.

Malik, a biology major, was among 264 college sophomores and juniors from around the country to receive a Goldwater Scholarship, which recognizes excellence in the fields of science and mathematics. She was selected from a field of more than 1,400 candidates. This marks the fifth consecutive year that a Rollins student has earned a Goldwater Scholarship.

"It means a lot," said Malik, 20, of the honor. "After doing all this hard work for three years, you're being recognized. It gives me confidence and shows my research is substantial."

The Goldwater Scholarship Foundation will contribute $7,000 toward Malik's undergraduate studies in her senior year in return for her pledge to participate in research after graduation. In support of her Goldwater application, Malik detailed a research project involving tumor adhesion that she conducted with the Walt Disney Memorial Cancer Institute in Orlando last summer. Malik tested a drug intended to prevent tumor cells from adhering to blood vessels.

Malik plans to attend medical school after graduation. She is primarily interested in the study of cancer and immunology.—KDH

The Archaeologist as Advocate

Hester Davis '52 never wanted to excavate the Egyptian pyramids, and she goes on a dig just once a year. But the State Archaeologist of Arkansas has done invaluable service to the profession as an administrator, publicist, and lobbyist. The antithesis of an Indiana Jones, her tireless, thoroughly unglamorous lobbying work led the state and federal governments to pass laws protecting prehistoric sites from federal works projects and protecting Native American grave sites from grave robbers seeking valuable artifacts. For these efforts, Hester Davis has won several professional awards and was named the Rollins College Distinguished Alumnus for 1996.

Interest in archaeology runs in the family, as Davis's older brother was a professional archaeologist and her sister did artwork for the archaeologist at Harvard's Peabody Museum. While Davis studied history at Rollins, she went on an excavation project at an early Pueblo Indian site in New Mexico during the summer between her junior and senior years. "We found a lot of great stuff and it was a good first experience," she said.

Before delving into archaeology, however, she pursued a master's degree at the University of North Carolina. After a two-year stint studying modern-day farmers with the Iowa College of Medicine, Davis decided archaeology was her true love. She had gone on excavations each summer and maintained contact with archaeology students in Iowa City. She wrote the director of the New Mexico excavation she had gone on while at Rollins—he was in Arkansas—and he offered her a job. Her first task was to teach classes in exhibit preparation and museum methods at the university museum. By 1967, when the Arkansas state legislature created the Archaeological Survey, Davis was well established as an administrator rather than a field researcher. This is still true in her current position as State Archaeologist, in which capacity she edits research papers and educates the public about the scientific and technical work of archaeology.

There are no existing tribal reservations in Arkansas, yet the state has been very active in protecting the ancient remains of Native Americans that once settled there, in part due to the efforts of Hester Davis. The state recently acquired two huge prehistoric sites and turned them into state parks. Davis works on the project, interpreting the materials found at these sites.

"The creation of the Archaeological Survey was the result of strong lobbying by amateur archaeologists," she said. "I learned about state government working with them on that program. At the federal level, preservation legislation came about because of the generic concerns of a lot of people around the country, but particularly in the Mississippi Valley. Farming practices by the Army Corps of Engineers and the Soil Conservation Service aided farmers to drain land and dig ponds but also destroyed many historical sites. There was no money available to protect these sites, even though it was the federal government doing the damage, so I and many others worked in the state legislature to require that federal agencies pay to look for and salvage prehistoric sites threatened by federal projects.

Another problem that has always plagued archaeology is old-fashioned grave robbing. According to Davis, this activity is driven primarily by the private art market. "The Indian pottery from late prehistoric times—1200 to 1400 A.D.—in the Mississippi Valley is quite beautiful. Some are painted, some have the effigy figures of animals, and some will sell for upwards of $25,000 on the art market. It pays for some people to dig illegally if they can't get permission otherwise."

Davis was a leader in the effort to pass state and federal legislation that specifically outlaws the disturbance and theft of bones and artifacts from unmarked graves. Native Americans throughout the country have aggressively sought protection of their ancestral grave sites, and several states have passed similar laws.

For her legislative efforts, Davis received a Distinguished Service Award from the Society for American Archaeology in 1994. She also received from the SAA an award for Excellence in Cultural Resource Management for working to save archaeological sites and raising public awareness. Her lobbying work at the federal level earned her the Seiberling Award from the Society of Professional Archaeologists. Most recently, she became The Honorable Hester Davis with her appointment by President Clinton to the National Cultural Property Commission, the purpose of which is to control illegal entry of historical artifacts into the country.

Recent federal legislation requires all museums or institutions that receive any federal funds to catalogue their caches of Native American artifacts and remains and return those materials to the tribes from which they came, even if those materials were discovered or purchased many years ago. "This will be an awfully long process because museums don't always know what they have," Davis said. "Many tribes have lost continuity with the past. But the law also requires that, for example, in the former Cherokee lands in North Carolina and Georgia, anything that's found there, even if it's 10,000 years old, the Cherokee have authority over what happens to it. We have to notify the tribes that may be descendants of the people who lived in the area, and they can ask for the remains back, or rebury them, or put them in their own vaults if they want."

Davis's career has bridged an important cultural shift in the field, from the era when Western scientists, infused with the mission to recapture the ancient past for posterity, often exhibited a cavalier disregard for the cultural traditions of native peoples, to the current climate of greater sensitivity and determination by native peoples to protect their own traditions. "Archaeologist's attitudes about the sacredness artifacts have changed in the last 20 years," Davis said. "The Indians now have power over the things we traditionally thought were ours, and that we treated as scientific specimens that belonged to the public. They say, 'We know about our past, we don't need you to tell us about our past, and those things are not yours, they're ours.'" — Bobby Davis '82

Jane Carrison Bockel '69

Jane Carrison Bockel '69 can be easily defined as a leader on many different levels. Along with husband David, she successfully operates a full-service advertising agency in Atlanta, Georgia. She is active in many community activities and for the past two years, has served on the board of directors of Rollins' Alumni Association. She also takes very seriously her role as mother to her two college-age children, Sarah and David.

How did Rollins prepare her for life beyond graduation?

"In my early student days, I wasn't exactly shy, but I didn't go out and pursue things," she replied. "However, particularly after I joined Pi Beta Phi, classmates encouraged me to get involved in more things, and I discovered that I had leadership potential. When people think of fraternities and sororities, they often think only of the party aspects. They forget that Greek organizations also encourage excellence in many other areas."

For the native of Jacksonville, Florida, deciding what college to attend wasn't a particularly difficult choice since both of her parents—H. George Carrison '33 and Ruth Hill Stone '39—graduated from Rollins. Her father, an investment banker, was appointed by then-President Hamilton Holt to serve as a trustee of the College, a position he held for 24 years, and helped the College secure needed financing during difficult times.

Like so many alumni, Bockel recalls the many friendships she forged at Rollins among both students and faculty. "Frank Windham, Leah Koontz and Charlie Mendell are some of the professors I recall fondly," she said. "They were truly friends. They took a personal interest in who we were and what we thought. Having instructors who really cared about us bolstered our self-confidence and gave credibility to our ideas and opinions."

After graduating with a degree in English, Bockel moved to Atlanta, where she landed a job as a sales assistant for WSB Television. "I made $100 per week. Despite the low pay, it was actually a very good job for a woman back then. I worked for a wonderful man who was dying of cancer. Because he needed to feel that he could count on his assistant when he wasn't in the office, he provided me opportunities management wished I hadn't had. When he died, I decided to leave the station and pursue other interests."

After working briefly for the DeKalb County Chamber of Commerce, Bockel became a media buyer for a family of companies operating ironically under the name of Rollins, Inc. When her children were born during the mid-1970s, she decided to put her professional life on hold.

"I retired for about a year, but my husband's agency was growing and I could see that he needed some help that I could offer," she said. "I also felt strongly about being home and raising my children, so I combined my talents and began working at home. My role in the agency just grew from there."

Bockel says she does not remember anyone at Rollins ever talking with her about what she wanted to do after graduation. She says, however, that that is probably as much a criticism of the times as it is of Rollins. "I think it is good that today, Rollins is putting so much effort into working with students in exploring their career goals and helping them develop talents they can use to find jobs after graduation. From the standpoint of an employer who has provided internships to Rollins students in the past, the College has apparently been successful in recruiting capable students who demonstrate above-average skills in interpersonal relationships combined with ambition."

"It's been a joy for me to get involved with the school again," Bockel added. "College is such an important part of everyone's life, and I think we often have to let go of it before we're ready. It's nice to be able to give something back for everything we have received in the past."—LRH

KNOW YOUR ALUMNI BOARD

Tom Sacha '67 '70CR

When Tom Sacha graduated with an M.B.A. degree from the Crummer School in 1970, he wasn't sure if he would spend his entire career in the banking industry. He was sure, however, where he wanted to live.

"Two decades ago, I told a headhunter to call me if there was ever an opening in Winter Park," he said with a smile. "So when he called six years ago and told me there was a branch manager position open with then SunBank in Winter Park, I didn't have to think twice. Where else could you work and be close enough to walk back to your college campus and feel like you're 22 again? I consider myself to be a lucky man."

Sacha says his luck began the first day he set foot on Rollins' campus. A native of St. Petersburg, he had already put down his deposit to attend Florida State University when one of his coaches told him about the liberal arts college in Winter Park.

"From the moment I walked around campus, I knew Rollins was the place for me," he said. "I wanted to play basketball on scholarship, and I ended up playing for Boyd Coffee, who taught me the importance of being a team player and that you can't do it all by yourself."

Sacha quickly adapted to life at Rollins. He got involved in student government, joined Sigma Nu fraternity, and in his junior year was recruited by then-Den of Men Fred Hicks to serve as an adviser in one of the residence halls.

"Becoming an RA made a big difference in my life," he said. "It probably took me out of the light of just being a follower and helped me to become more of a role model for others. The experience helped me realize that you get out of anything what you put into it."

Sacha says one of the things he remembers most about his Rollins days was the pleasure of knowing everyone on campus. "As president of the senior class, I had to introduce every member of our class to Hugh McKean. That was a challenge, but it is an example of how close we were as a campus community. You had the opportunity to meet so many different types of people at Rollins from so many different walks of life. It prepared us for many of the relationships we would experience beyond college."

Sacha earned his bachelor's degree in economics from Rollins in 1967. After taking a year off to fulfill his obligations with the Army Reserve, he returned to Crummer and received his master's degree three years later. He went to work for the Trust Company of Georgia following graduation. He joined Barnett Bank in Tampa in 1981 and remained there until his present position with SunTrust opened up in 1990.

One of the things Sacha says he enjoys most about banking is that it allows him to remain active in his community. He is past president of his Rotary Club and the local YMCA, and will take over as president of the Winter Park Chamber of Commerce Jan. 1. He serves as adult chairman of the "Weekends" drug-alternative program at Winter Park High School as well as referee for local college basketball games.

"For 15 years, I was a referee in the Sunshine State Conference," he recalled. "The highlight of that experience was that it allowed me to referee Rollins basketball games. While it put me in the awkward position of having to be impartial in the calls, it was a thrill nonetheless."

A member of the Alumni Association Board of Directors for nearly a decade, Sacha says one of the recent joys for him has been working with members of the Student Alumni Association. "I feel that the more contact they can have while they are still students will affect their relationship with the College long after they graduate."

"It's difficult for me to understand how people can leave Rollins and never have contact with the school again," he added. "Every time I walk back on campus, it makes me feel good. Every time I attend an event or lecture, it's like I never left. I would encourage alumni to come back to reunion and feel young again. You'd be surprised how great you feel when you come back and participate in some of the activities and visit with old friends."—LRH

Young Alumni moving up in the World

Soggy feet and ruined shoes are what made Woody Nash '90 what he is today: a successful entrepreneur.

In 1994, Nash founded The New England Overshoe Company, which distributes high performance overshoes in the U.S., Canada, and overseas. Called NEOs, the overshoes are worn over dress shoes to protect them from the elements. Nash got the idea for the product while working as a bond trader on Wall Street during winter storms.

"I was slipping all over the place," he recalled. "I was ruining my shoes and arriving everywhere with wet feet. I was using a different pair of overshoes that didn't have traction and they weren't terribly fashionable. I realized a need for a souped-up overshoe."

So, armed with a great idea and a partner versed in product development, Nash delivered a prototype to L.L. Bean, which is now a customer. NEOs are sold through a number of catalogues as well as retail stores such as Nordstrom's. Since its inception, the company has grown by 1,000 percent, said Nash.

"It's been a ton of fun," he said.

Quite a feat for someone who's only business management experience came from running a painting contracting firm during summer breaks from Rollins. "I never miss an opportunity, but I also have a tremendous amount of luck."

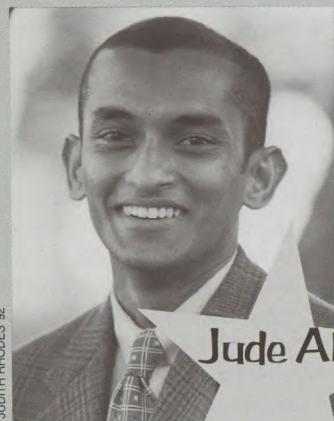

While at Rollins, Nash founded the environmentally conscious Greenhouse group, formed a rock group, and was SGA vice president. He said Rollins was an open door for him.

"There were no barriers to getting involved. There was a real opportunity for me to try things and see how they worked."—KDH

JUDITH RHODES '92

Jude Alexander '91

Jude Alexander '91 hadn't planned on becoming a doctor when he grew up. "I always wanted to be a film director, but I didn't think that was practical," he said.

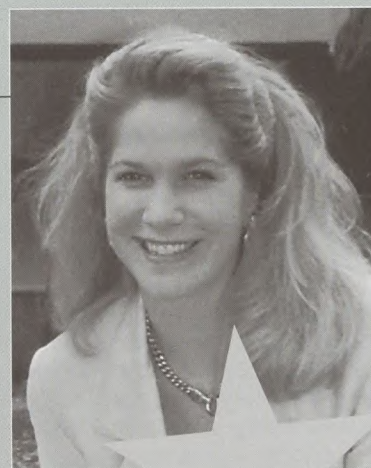

So after graduating from Rollins, Alexander headed off to medical school at the University of Miami, where he concentrated on internal medicine and psychiatry. He currently is interning at Duke University for more than 12 hours a day. "It's the hardest thing I've ever done; it's very time consuming."

A biology major and former editor of the Sandspur, Alexander worked as an admission counselor at Rollins for a year after graduation. "It was a wonderful experience. I got to take time off before medical school, and I got to do something for my alma mater."

Alexander said the human aspect of medicine, rather than the scientific element, is what attracted him to the field. "I like the people interaction—being exposed to a lot of different people and being allowed the privilege of being in somebody else's life."

He said attending Rollins was a major boost to his medical career. "I think Rollins gave me an edge. I was able to do a lot of things not related to science. I was in service clubs, worked on the school paper, was on faculty hiring committees. I got very broad experience in a very nurturing environment."—KDH

Katherine Green '90

If climbing the ladder of career success were an Olympic event, Katherine Greene would surely take the gold.

In just three years with GTE Mobilnet, the wireless business unit of the giant telecommunications company, Greene has vaulted her way up through six positions with GTE to become director of industry relations. She has been responsible for company projects across the country, from retail store construction to network implementation. Greene is also in charge of managing business relations with GTE partners and investors.

"I've been very lucky," she said. "I've had a lot of great opportunities."

Upon graduation in 1990, Greene hit the road running and hasn't stopped yet. She entered graduate school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and earned two master's degrees—one in urban planning, the other in public administration—in only two years. "I worked like a dog," she said. "I had no life."

She then worked a year for a real estate developer in Nashville, acting as a liaison with local government to obtain approval for commercial development projects. Greene was hired away in 1993 by GTE. She is now based at GTE's headquarters in Atlanta.

In reflecting on her rapid rise in the business world, Greene gave credit to Rollins. "The thing I treasure most about my education is the personal attention the professors gave to molding students and their skills," she said. "They didn't so much teach the answers as teach you how to find the answers. What I really took away from Rollins is the ability to think through problems and solve them."

She also values the friendships she made. "I developed friendships with professors and Chi Omega sisters that I still have today. They are a support mechanism that helps me as a person."—KDH

Two creative outlets bring success to sculptor/inventor

At a glance, you might say Rollins graduate Preston Willingham '79 has become an overnight success. Since March of this year, he's been featured in newspaper articles, interviewed by People magazine, seen on CBS This Morning, and introduced on Prime Time ABC. All this for a sculptor-inventor who grew up in Winter Park and is now attracting a great deal of attention for a device that some medical professionals are calling a revolutionary invention to prevent and relieve back pain. They call it the Backjoy seat, a "sort of modern running shoe for your spine," said Willingham, who devised the orthopedic medical product to alleviate his dad's chronic back pain. "When I saw how much pain my father was in, I decided I was going to invent something to help him," Willingham said. "I researched every product for back pain until I came up with a brand new theory."

Backjoy doesn't rest on the back of a chair. Unlike back cushions or wedges, Backjoy's curved design produces a flexing and cupping action that improves posture and provides support for the lower back in any sitting position. The product, distributed by Sunsource International, Inc. is now available at drug stores and major retail outlets. Willingham brought it to market more than eight years ago, selling his first 75,000 units strictly by word-of-mouth. After three years in the New York market and the boost of a well-placed newspaper article and TV spot this year, he said, "I literally was discovered."

Now the two creative outlets in his life, sculpting and inventing, have come together to give him a notoriety he had not anticipated. The added boost came when Desilu, Too; CBS Entertainment and Vador Inc. commissioned him to create an official line of Lucille Ball memorabilia in porcelain, including a salt-and-pepper shaker based on Lucy and Ethel's famous chocolate factory scene and a cookie jar shaped like the 1950s-era Pontiac convertible the Ricardos and Mertzes drove to California. "They're retro kitsch functional things," he said. "Instead of sculpting Lucy, I sculpt her as we remember her—that look in the face, the spirit," he said. "Lucille Ball's face changed my career overnight."

All this sudden attention could easily overwhelm, but as Willingham can attest, the effort certainly hasn't been overnight. "I've done exactly the same thing since I graduated. It's just all kind of gelled," said the Winter Park High School graduate known at home for his large outdoor sculptures. Over the years, he has completed nine commissions of public sculpture on permanent display, two war memorials installed in public parks and 12 private commissions. One sculpture resides in former President Ronald Reagan's library.

Among his commissioned public pieces, "Florida Pioneers," a life-size bronze sculpture in front of the Osceola County Courthouse, was designated a state historic monument. Another bronze and iridescent glass sculpture rests at the Peggy and Philip B. Crosby Wellness Center at Winter Park Memorial Hospital. Willingham, who now lives in Park City, Utah, has introduced dozens of creative products to the general market. Consider, for example, his electronic baseball bat, the dieter's laughing scale that howls when you step on it, and a diet dog that attaches to the refrigerator and growls when the door moves. He holds three patents, including one for the Backjoy seat. While sculpting remains his main occupation, inventing, he said, "is the way I let my funny bone out."

Willingham's first success as an entrepreneur and inventor came in junior high school. A Florida native and avid surfer, he began sculpting surf board designs out of polyurethane foam. The designs soon won the admiration of fellow surfers, and he began producing them for a profit.

At Rollins, however, he said he learned to put his abilities to work as an art major. "Rollins is an important catalyst. It's been such a whole part of my existence," he said. There were "incredible influences" at Rollins, but art professor Tom Peterson, he said, was the one who recognized his talent and urged him to study sculpture. He also encouraged Willingham to compensate for his dyslexia by focusing on art, where he used memory, mimicry and touch to overcome problems associated with reading. "He encouraged me to search for creativity," Willingham said. "He gave us the spark. That's what Peterson gave us. He was instrumental in helping me focus on creativity as much as the craft."

Willingham first turned his attention to inventions. Aligned with a representative from Mattel toys, he began working on ideas to develop new toys. He later began focusing on others inventions. "I'm the one who told my dad to stuff a college education," he said. "I'm the prodigal son." Encouraged by his father to put his art to work in other creative ways, Willingham began concentrating on a way to help his dad ease back pain. He interviewed older retired doctors, physical therapists, osteopathic physicians, chiropractors, and neurological surgeons about what would be needed. Honing in on his knowledge of anatomy, he began visualizing, seeing with the mind's eye inside the human body. "The medical community and ergonomics approach is based on general shapes. But my belief is everybody's spine has a different curve. That was the big creative spark. They diagnosed incorrectly. You have to fit it to yourself like a shoe. Backjoy cradles the pelvis like a support stocking cradles the legs, and it worked much better than I ever dreamed of," he said.

Using your creativity to make something work or cure someone's pain has its own rewards, he says. Now he's hoping the success of his commercial products will support his art which draw more income than his commercial ventures. With his emphasis on fine art, he's looking to complete enough pieces for an exhibition of his work. "Finally," he said, "I'm going to be able to make my art." —AWM

Remembering Sara Howden

I have continued to take pride in my Rollins roots. As a native Winter Parkite, I have enjoyed strolling around the campus, and walking down Park Avenue on my occasional visits back home.

Rollins is on my mind today. Sara Harbottle Howden was the mother of my neighborhood friends, and over time she became a folk hero of mine. She was a dynamic woman on the proud order of Eleanor Roosevelt (whom I heard speak at the Animated Magazine). It was around the age of 13-14 I complained mildly to my mother that Mrs. Howden asked me hard questions and though I was flattered she often spoke to me adult-like, it was also threatening since I did not have the foggiest idea to what she referred. My mother, also a wise woman, noted I was already an expert on issues found on the sports page of the Sentinel, so she advised I should now concentrate on the front cover and the editorial pages, then added, "Read the Time Magazine cover-to-cover as well." I did this since it was axiomatic advice, and besides I was growing desperate! The next time Sara (Mrs. Howden to me to this day) asked me, "Bobby, what do you think of the upcoming Florida Senate race?" I could reply, "I think your candidate is way ahead of her time (like Sara) but hopefully she will prevail." I have often referred to her, though not always by name, and emphasized to my students the importance of treating naive youngsters with the dignity and integrity they most certainly deserve, and that by asking "hard questions" of them you demonstrate your esteem as well as your confidence in their ability.

On my mind also is Bill Gordon ('51) and his lovely wife. Bill was my high school coach, and the Gordons honored me by being my (now grown) kid's god-parents. Bill, as we know, is a good-natured fellow and no doubt he is enjoying his retirement.

I see Gordon Hahn M.D. ('57) here in Boca from time to time. I am overjoyed he is my doctor when I need him. He and I have had more than a few nostalgic chuckles from Rollins recollections.

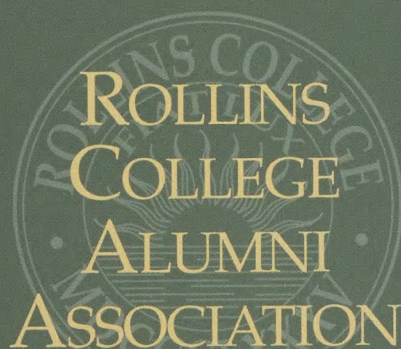

I would love to hear from/see any of my old (no pun intended) classmates.
