

Apollo and Daphne

A voice I haven't heard before traversing the pillow's length between our faces We're no good at knowing who to run from although I'm not sure who says we have to be she loves me, she loves me not slowly running out petals we turn ourselves into flowers because the only danger they face is picking by Edwin Davis

