The Steering Committee has decided that it is in the best interest of the faculty to call off the meeting scheduled for Monday, April 9 (I doubt anyone will be disappointed). Steve Phelan has been appointed the new director of the Honors Degree Program, and because he should have a hand in shaping the Program, along with the fact that there were questions voiced about the new Program proposal, it seems best that we should postpone consideration of the proposal. The diploma will not be latinized for the May degrees, so the proposal concerning how honors are awarded can be considered later. Finally, the other item on the agenda--allowing students to fulfill general education requirements with a credit/no credit grade--can be considered at the regularly scheduled meeting on April 30. Please mark this date on your calendar.

Finally, the Steering committee will host an open meeting on April 26, from 12-1 p.m. in the French House, to discuss with any faculty the items on the agenda for the April meeting.

A minor in Classical Studies offers a student the opportunity to explore the cultures of ancient Greece and Rome through a well-rounded curriculum in language, literature, philosophy, history, and art. Courses in the classical languages and literature (in the original and translation) are at its core, but students are encouraged to take advantage of a wide range of perspectives on these ancient civilizations by enrolling in courses offered through the coordinated resources of several Departments within the college.

This interdisciplinary program is based on the premise that the study and appreciation of the classical period--the beginnings of Western civilization--form the heart of a modern liberal education. The purpose of the minor is to make our classical heritage accessible to modern students so that they can both share in it and evaluate it critically. Students will acquire at least a minimal competence in Latin (and/or Greek) and develop the ability to enjoyably and intelligently manipulate the literature, history, and culture of the ancient Greek and Roman worlds.

The minor in Classical Studies is designed for students who want a background in classical civilization while they plan a life and career in academics, medicine, law, business, or any other pursuit for which a liberal arts education is appropriate. Students who desire to complete this minor are required to take eight courses in the program, at least three of which must be in Latin (and/or Greek) language. The remaining courses may be any combination of Latin, Greek, or translation/interdisciplinary offerings:

I. Announcements

- A. Dr. Bob Carson reported from the Financial Aid Committee about policies affecting honors students.
- B. Dean Bari Watkins reported on admission statuses, and that Dr. Richard Lima will be the coordinator for freshman advising.

II. Business

- A. Dr. Steve Neilson presented a motion from the Curriculum Committee: "A minor in classical studies be adopted." The motion passed.
- B. Dr. Neilson presented a motion from the Curriculum Committee: "Internships, including those taken in the major field, are normally offered on a credit/no credit basis." The motion passed.
- C. In the absence of the chair of the Standards Committee, Dr. Hoyt Edge presented a motion from that committee: "Students may take courses to satisfy general education requirements on a credit/no credit basis." This resolution was designed to eliminate a contradiction in policies. A student taking a course credit/no credit must receive a C- to pass, while a student taking courses for a grade may pass with a grade of D-. Dean Bari Watkins explained that the problems with this resolution include that it may eliminate motivation in better students, and also that it will produce external problems with interpretation of a student's transcript. Outsiders do not realize that a student needs a C- to pass a credit, no credit course. The committee rejected the idea of raising to C- the criterion for passing general education requirements, since many students meet the quantitative reasoning, and natural science requirements by getting grades of D. The motion was defeated.

- D. Dr. Phelan presented a motion from the Honors Degree Supervisory Board: "The Honors Degree Supervisory Board may experiment with the Honors degree program next year, including offering additional courses and report to the faculty next year on the status of the program."

Dr. Phelan reported that the current program is based on accident, not substance. The current board is trying to rectify this by moving toward a COL model--the students will take some courses together and have group-related extracurricular activities.

Plans for next year include a retreat, the admission of current freshmen, a freshman seminar done as a required course, and three special courses that honors students will be encouraged to take. The program is seen as a 4 year program, with a 3 year option. Faculty comments centered on the need for the program to have a direction. It should either encourage group interactions or independent work. The motion passed.
