Additions to the Rollins Faculty

TWO NEW faculty appointments in the departments of science and economics were announced this summer as Dr. Isaac Croom Beatty, III, was named instructor in chemistry and Dr. Clifford E. Maser was appointed instructor in business administration.

Dr. Beatty succeeds Dr. Gilbert E. Moos, who has resigned his post as instructor in chemistry. A graduate of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., with a Bachelor of Science degree in 1935, Dr. Beatty received his M.A. degree from Oberlin College in 1937 and his Ph.D. degree from Yale University in June. Assisting in general chemistry at Oberlin for two years, and in organic chemistry for a similar period at Yale, he was a student of advanced qualitative analysis, thermodynamics, colloids, qualitative organic analysis and special topics in organic chemistry. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, and the American Chemical Society.

A flying enthusiast, Dr. Beatty holds a private pilot's license with 130 hours of solo experience.

Dr. Maser's appointment will strengthen the department of business administration and economics which has steadily increased in popularity among both men and women students during the past few years. With the addition of a new faculty member in this department, it is expected that several extra courses in business administration will be available to students this fall.

Dr. Maser is a graduate of Swarthmore College, and completed his work for a Ph.D. degree at the Universities of Cologne and Bonn in Germany in 1936, receiving Magna Cum Laude honors at his graduation. In 1937 he studied the courses in business administration at the University of Vienna, and has since been employed as Executive Assistant with the Carobronze Roehrenwerke in Vienna, and the Carobronze, Ltd., in London, where his major duties consisted of the adjustment of wages and economic problems brought about by the devaluations of the currencies in European countries.

Three changes in personnel of resident heads was made necessary this summer by the resignations of Mrs. Nell B. Lester, Mrs. Margaret Coe and Miss Effie Jane Buell. Miss Isabel Green, '28, has been added to the staff as Pi Beta Phi resident head, replacing Mrs. Marion H. Wilcox who has been assigned to Cloverleaf dormitory, Mrs. Frank Scott has been appointed resident head for the Phi Delta Theta fraternity and Mrs. John Russell Kennedy will be in Strong Hall.

Mrs. Kennedy's late husband was the Associated Press correspondent in Japan and later official advisor of the Japanese Foreign Office. Mrs. Kennedy has been one of the house mothers at Washington and Lee University.

The Woodstock Reunion

ALUMNI, faculty, undergraduates, trustees, prospective students and parents gathered at Sunset Hill, summer home of President Holt, on August 17 to wish him a happy birthday and to enjoy the informal fellowship of these summer reunions.

Dean Arthur D. Enyart presided over the informal meeting which followed a picnic luncheon held on the shore of Roseland Lake. Dr. Clifford Maser, new Business Administration professor, was introduced; Bruce McCreary of Louisville, Kentucky, received the "long distance" prize. President Hamilton Holt was then introduced and spoke of general conditions for the college and also of the political and world situation. Prexy asked that all Democrats who were going to vote for Willkie stand and he awarded a prize (a glass elephant) to the

by MAROLYN MACKEMER, '39

IF YOU want to feel "at home", choose a freighter for your ocean voyage. Perhaps I was lucky, but the "Astri", a Swedish cargo ship, seemed more like a private yacht, and what good times we nine passengers had during the 24-day trip to Buenos Aires! We even had a canvas tank erected on the back deck for swimming.

Then England declared war on Germany, and there was plenty of nervousness caused by the fear of running into warcraft of either nation. You see, we had both English and German people aboard. Our Swedish captain, whose neutral ship was sunk under him in the last war, restocked the lifeboats and warned us to be prepared for anything. At our first port we painted a huge Swedish flag on both sides of the ship, and this was kept well-lighted at night during the remainder of the voyage.

After seventeen days without sight of land, we reached Rio de Janeiro. The entrance into Rio's harbor is breath-taking! Rocky cliffs rise on both sides, and the brilliantly-lighted city shows up against a background of towering mountains capped by the gigantic marble statue of the Christ with arms outstretched. The following morning we set out to see the city, and here are a tourists's hasty impressions: the open flower market comprising a square block; the strong "cafe con lech" (half coffee and half milk) which takes the place of our "cokes"; the mosaic sidewalks with trees growing along the outer edges; the ornate architecture of the old stone buildings contrasted with the ultra-modern apartment buildings being erected alongside; the beautiful residences and gardens; the small stature of the dark-skinned Brazilian people; the quantity of milreis (Brazilian dollars) you can buy for an American dollar; the beautiful, broad beach which lines the harbor and which is crowded with bathers most of the year; the cable ride to the top of Sugar Loaf, a small mountain standing in the center of the harbor.

Santos, leading coffee port of the world, is a large city, but with little of beauty or interest for the visitor. We loaded great quantities of bananas here for Buenos Aires, and we reached the latter, our destination, five days later without further stops.

Buenos Aires, with 2,500,000 of Argentina's fourteen million inhabitants, is quite a modern city, boasting fine hotels, excellent water and sanitation, and the best meat in the world. Two of its newspapers, La Prensa and La Nacion, are said to rival the New York Times. Its largest department store is English, but the French influence is readily noted in their chic clothes and hats, in art, and in literature. The Argentine woman is famous for being well-dressed and it is a fascinating pastime to stroll down Florida Street, which is closed to traffic after 10:00 A. M., during the tea hour, when everyone comes out "to see and to be seen".

Most of the stores and business houses open at 9:00 A. M. and close at noon for lunch and siesta. Open again at 3:00 P. M., they do not close until about 8:00 P. M. Tea is a necessity and comes between four and six o'clock. The cocktail hour is from eight to nine, and dinner between nine and ten. Once I even dined at midnight. Breakfast is "continental", consisting of a hard roll (usually without butter or jam) and "cafe con leche". Lunch and dinner are incredibly huge, and five courses are a minimum. An example would be: (1) cold cuts (2) soup (3) fish (4) kidneys or omelette (5) vegetables (6) chicken (7) steak and green salad (8) fruit (9) demi-tasse coffee.

The social season is during the winter months of July, August and September and centers around the opera, to which such stars as Tito Schipa come from the United States. Large parties are often given in lovely homes. Young Argentine girls are heavily-chaperoned, even after they become engaged. Even I, a North American, had to find a married couple to accompany us if I dated an Argentine boy, to comply with convention, although it was perfectly all right for me to date English or United States boys without a chaperone. Argentine women have very few rights, nor do they seem to want them. They are perhaps more sheltered than the women of any other Latin American country.

I lived at the American Women's Club for two months before I finally found a Porto Rican family with whom to live and practice my Spanish. Meanwhile, I had met many North Americans through a few letters of introduction which I had fortunately secured before leaving the United States, and they in turn presented me to Argentines. However, each nationality usually stays to itself, and the Argentine does not make friends readily. I felt very lucky in being invited to various Argentine homes and soon narrowed down my contacts to chiefly Argentine, to the extent that when I started home last month, I had considerable difficulty in speaking English at first. Once you are his friend, there is nothing an Argentine will not do for you, and they surely were wonderful to me. One of the most interesting weeks-ends I have ever spent was with the Minister of Irrigation and his family at a huge estancia in Cordoba. We had a nine-hole golf course, a lake complete with canoes and launches, riding, and a club for dancing. Everyone does as he pleases, and the host is always prepared for any number of unexpected guests, who may stay not only for a meal but for several days. We lunched outdoors, a type of barbecue called an "asado". One day we were invited to a neighboring estancia of 15,000 acres, owned by a young Argentine whom I knew in Buenos Aires. He showed us some of his 12,000 head of cattle, 1,000 sheep and 500 goats which graze freely over the unfenced expanses of land. He is an excellent polo player and keeps a string of some fifty horses for this pursuit alone.

I went to Chile during the summer months of January and February, and upon my return to Buenos Aires, I found a position in the Argentine Automobile Club,

Rollins in Who's Who

THE BIOGRAPHIES of nineteen members of the Rollins College faculty, headed by President Hamilton Holt, are included in the latest edition of "Who's Who in America", bringing over 25% of the Rollins teaching body into the listing of this country's most prominent men and women.

Fifty-three lines of space in the new volume are devoted to a sketchy account of President Holt's record of achievements as educator, editor and peace worker. Others representing Rollins in the publication include Dr. Winslow S. Anderson, dean of the College and professor of chemistry; Dr. Arthur D. Enyart, dean of men and professor of business economics; Dr. Edwin O. Grover, vice-president of the College and professor of books; Dr. Thomas Pearce Bailey, professor of philosophy, psychology and ethology, and consulting psychologist; Dr. William Henry Fox, member of the Board of Trustees and director of the department of art; Alfred J. Hanna, professor of history; Dr. William Melcher, professor of business administration.

Also, Dr. Fred Lewis Pattee, professor of American literature; Willard A. Wattles, professor of English and journalism; Dr. Jeremiah S. Young, visiting professor of government; William F. Yust, librarian; Edwin P. Granberry, associate professor of English; Miss Virginia Robie, associate professor of art; Dr. John Martin, conference leader and consultant on International Relations; Dr. Jessie B. Rittenhouse, conference leader and consultant in the art of poetry writing; Dr. George G. Scott, consultant in zoology; Josiah Edward Spurr, consultant in geology; and James Madison Glass, professor of secondary education.

Democrat who received the most applause — Fred Hanna received the elephant!

Following President Holt's talk a group from the New York Rollins Club presented "The Road Tour of the Animated Magazine". According to the announcement, because the famous personages fell by the wayside, the tried and true professors took over. President Holt (Mort Lichtenstein) presided, Professor Weinberg (Nat Felder) kept order, Mr. Brown (Dudley Darling) presented the financial statement, Professors Bailey and Pierce received honorary degrees (Davitt Felder), Professors Uphof and Feuerstein met for a chat (Davitt Felder and Mort Lichtenstein) and Dean Enyart (Rod MacArthur) interviewed a new student (Boyd France). Throughout the program of the Magazine, a messenger boy kept bringing telegrams in rhyme from "absent professors".

After much visiting and chatting one by one reluctantly told Prexy and one another goodbye promising to meet again soon in Winter Park. Another Summer Reunion was over.

Art students receive practical training — here are several students working on mural in the fencing room in the Rollins Commons. Students have decorated the walls of the dining room most attractively depicting the various phases of life on the Rollins campus.

Rollins Day at the New York World's Fair

SATURDAY, JUNE 15, was Rollins Day at the World's Fair. The facilities of the Florida Building were made available, and the reception and program took place in the attractive Governor's Lounge on the second floor, where punch was served from four o'clock on. An alumni meeting was held at five o'clock and at six-thirty Dr. Holt and Peggy Conklin, '43, broadcast a short ten-minute skit over WNYC. The radio skit was written by Captain Hartzell of New York and was purportedly a humorous inquisition by Peggy on why Dr. Holt came to Rollins College.

Dinner was served to 86 of the 180 present who wished to stay for the remainder of the program. Unfortunately it rained just enough to alter the original plan for dinner to be served in the patio on the grounds of the Florida Building. Seats were taken for fifty of the Rollins guests for the 8:30 show of the Aquacade.

The program presided over by President Holt and Nancy Cushman, chairman of the Board of Directors of the New York Rollins Alumni Club, included a short talk by Osa Johnson, explorer and author of the best-seller, I Married Adventure, Cecile Hulse Mattschat who wrote The Suwannee River, and just a word by Blaine Corder, actor of stage and radio. The World's Fair selected Osa Johnson to be the Fair's Guest of Honor on that day, so Rollins was doubly honored.

The guests, numbering around 180, were from alumni clubs from Washington to Boston, from the undergraduate body at Rollins, mothers and fathers of prospective students and these prospective students themselves, several former faculty members and guests invited from the Florida Society of New York.

Clementine Hall, '30, of New York City was in general charge of arrangements for the day.

Gearing Rollins to National Defense

TRAINED man-power for national defense is needed today more than ever before in the history of our country. Events of recent months prove unquestionably that this training must be highly specialized—in aviation, in the handling of machines, in chemistry, all phases of radio work, etc.

Rollins College has an opportunity to take a leading position in national defense training. Here is why:

AVIATION — The municipal airport at Orlando, four miles from the campus is one of the best in the country. The recent removal of the Army Air Corps' 23rd Composite Group from Maxwell Field to Orlando makes the latter field an official army airport. The climate ideally affords all year flying. Under the Civil Aeronautics Authority's program, Rollins students this spring made one of the best records of any college operating under the C.A.A., with only one failure out of thirty enrolled. Rollins has enrolled for training an additional forty-five students this summer, the quota allowed, out of over one hundred applications.

A Rollins Aviation Committee is being formed to expand and supervise training in both ground work and in flying. More students can be accommodated when college opens the end of September.

CHEMISTRY — Special chemical training is required for gas defense, for explosives, for the development of synthetic substitutes, and in the general mobilization of industry. Rollins, due to the growing reputation of its chemistry department, is well equipped to train specialists in theoretical and practical chemistry useful for national defense purposes.

RADIO — Rollins has always taken a leading position among colleges in radio work. The station WDBO of the Columbia Broadcasting System originated on the campus, then was moved to Orlando as a commercial station. One of the few college short wave station, W4GMN, was erected in 1939 on the campus. The college is prepared to undertake specialized radio training for national defense, and many students are eager to get into it.

CONSCRIPTION — Students are urged to complete registration and in the event any student is conscripted, satisfactory arrangements will be made between student and college. In fact, the President has urged college students to remain in college.

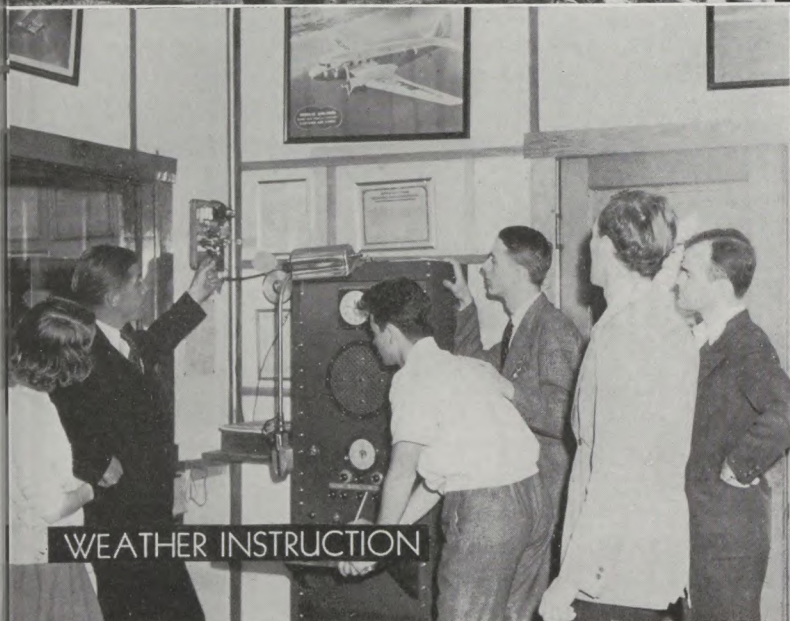

Those who enroll in these courses preparing for national defense may take them as part of their regular work. Students will be selected after careful examination, and, of course, only with the permission of their parents.

In addition to the courses described above, Rollins is placing great emphasis on teaching the Spanish language, Latin-American history and geography, with a view to preparing young men and women to take full advantage of the now pressing and increasing necessity of Pan-American solidarity.

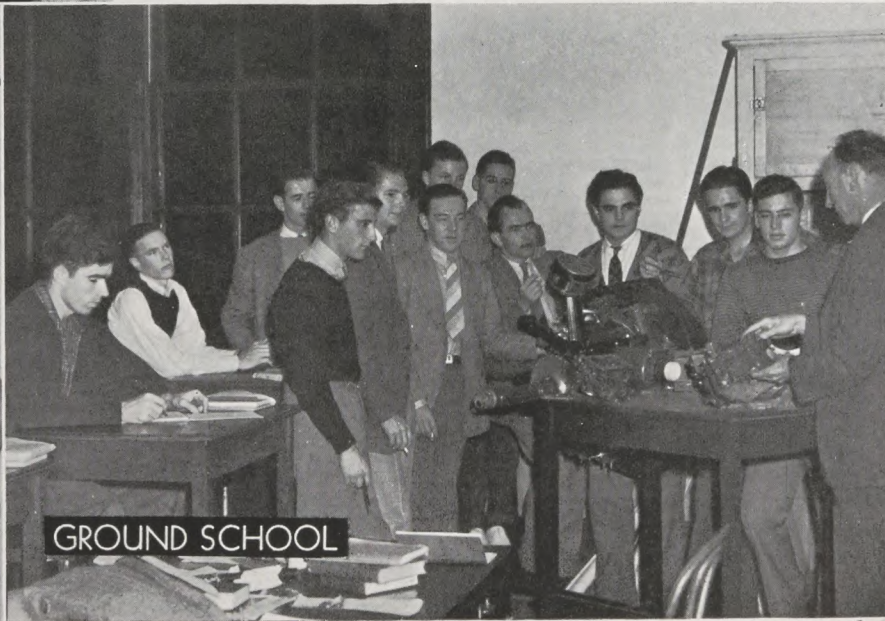

The college has no intention of fostering militarism in any form, but it would be remiss in its patriotic duty if it did not welcome the opportunity to do its full share to prepare its young men and women for the defense of their country as well as for any emergencies ahead. In any event, they will be equipped to win an important place for themselves in one of the most dynamic branches of modern industry

Hope and Cheer In England

by WILLIAM BACON EVANS, '29

I ARRIVED in England this spring when the May blossoms were at their height and when the Bluebells Queen Victoria loved made a carpet at Kew Gardens. In spite of the bright flowers and the blackbirds' song there were many reminders that England was at war. Great captive balloons like a school of whales hung over the city. The foundations of important buildings were protected by sand-bags. Parks and open squares had been burrowed for shelters, and plate-glass windows had been reinforced by criss-crossed bands of heavy paper or cloth.

While there was no shortage of food and while business went on much as usual, there were helmeted soldiers passing and repassing, especially about the railway terminals. At night there was scarcely a ray of light to be seen from any quarter. The evenings are long at this season, but when night did come, it was night indeed.

A few people, elderly gentlemen mostly, carried gas-masks. Otherwise the people who thronged the sidewalks went about their tasks normally. The crowd thickened about the newspaper bulletins, and boys and men with hoarse voices cried the headlines. England, the England we love, was facing the realities stoically.

I had gone to England to attend the annual meeting of the Friends or Quakers. They met as usual in their house on Euston Road. A larger attendance than usual was noted, although visitors from other countries were few. For years Friends have seen war clouds gathering, have worked to bring about understanding and reconciliation, and now that war has come they are not altogether unprepared. They have made of their minds as to their own part. They cannot share in war. They try to remove the causes of war, and failing in that, they try to bind up its wounds.

The older Friends as well as the younger do not shrink from suffering. They are willing to lose their money and their property. Some of them expect to be imprisoned. They may lose their lives, but they cannot fight. Having come to this settlement of mind, they have little cause to fear. They love their country, and realize that the future of England hangs in the balance. Love, long-suffering, returning good for evil seem to them the ends most worth striving for. So, with hope and cheer they wait for a brighter day, and realize it in some measure even now.

handling the English correspondence. It was very interesting and valuable experience, both in speaking Spanish and in studying Argentine business methods and ideas. I took a course in Spanish correspondence and attended various classes in history and economics at the University of Buenos Aires. The number of girls in the classes surprised me.

The first question most people ask is "How do the Argentine people feel about the war?" I would say that their sympathy is with England, but that due to the fact that they have not the military strength to aid, they are more impartial and look at the question from the standpoint of a spectator rather than from that of a possible participant, as we do. Argentina is a democracy and her Constitution is closely patterned after our own. She wants to stay that way, although there have been rumors that the army is Fascistic and would like to get President Ortiz out of office. However, I believe that the Argentine government is more stable than that of any other Latin American country.

Argentine people have a great admiration for the United States and its achievements, but they resent our "protective" attitude and tell us they can look after themselves without our interference. They resent our undiplomatic handling of the meat deal, and some have the feeling that we would "use" them and their trade only to our own advantage. They also get some pretty bad impressions of us and our life from the United States movies which are very popular there.

In a year I had become so settled down there and had made so many fine friends that it proved harder than I ever could have imagined to say "goodbye" and even now there are times when I get a little homesick for Buenos Aires and wish that I could drop in there for at least a short visit. They say that anyone who has drunk the Argentine maté (a kind of strong tea) will return some day. I have and I hope they are not wrong.

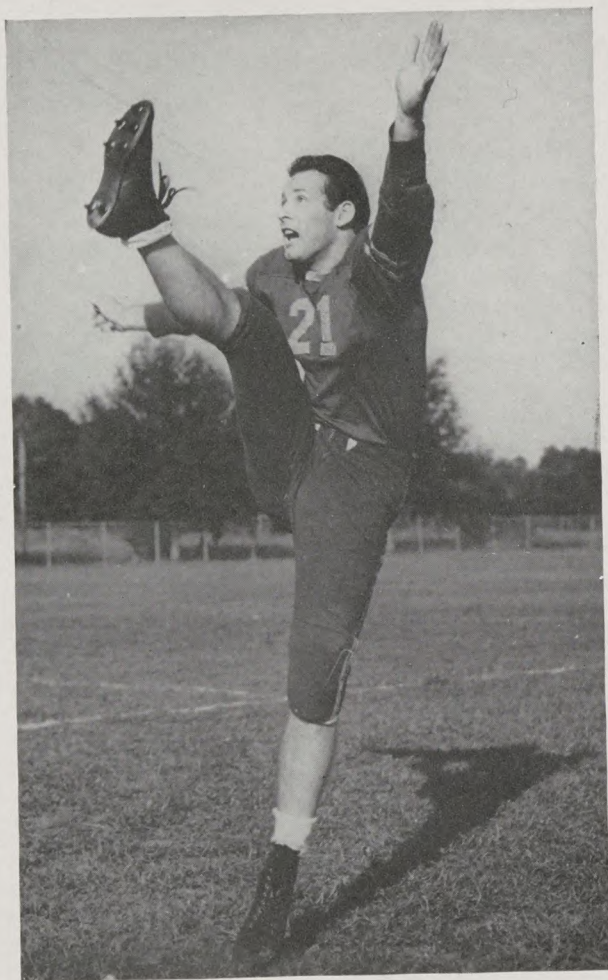

ROLLINS ALUMNI RECORD

Football

Bob Davis, '41, of Erie, Pa., sensational Rollins kicker whose dependable playing was a brilliant feature of last year's football campaign.

A SQUAD of 24 Rollins College football candidates, including 15 lettermen, reported to Coach Jack McDowall in Asheville, N. C., on September 1st for its third annual pre-season training grind in the Land of the Sky. The Tars were minus such 1939 stars as Quarterback Joe Justice, Center Paul Bouton, End Bill Daugherty, Tackle Don Ogilvie, Guard Al Swan, and Halfback Joe Johnson, but Coaches McDowall and Waite were confident that the berths would be filled capably by the date of the opening game with Western Carolina Teachers College.

The loss of Justice, who played sensationally last year throughout Rollins' successful season which found the Tars dropping but one game — to Miami by 6-14 — gives McDowall his No. 1 headache. Yet, he believes he has the answer to the problem in June Lingerfelt who will be playing his final season at end for the Tars, or Earl Brankert, 155-pound back from Oakland, Fla. Lingerfelt was named on the All-Florida team last season and is regarded as one of the best flankmen in Rollins football history.

Coach McDowall's first team worries are at a minimum, but once past the starting eleven the outlook is not so bright. However, the bespectacled mentor has faced this same problem before and is expected to find the right solution in time to harass all opposition.

The starting lineup for the opening games will probably include June Lingerfelt of Asheville and Joe Knowles, Leesburg, ends; Leonard "Tiny" Phillips, Leesburg, and Mel Clanton, Lakeland, tackles; Buddy Bryson, Asheville, and Doyle Darnold, Orlando, guards; John Giantonio, Cleveland, O., center; Sam Hardman, Laddonia, Mo., Clyde Jones, Asheville, Lou Bethea, Leesburg, Earl Brankert, Oakland, Fla., backs.

Class of 1928

Secretary: Carter Bradford, Box 1470, Orlando, Fla. Sixteenth Reunion in 1944.

Greetings playmates! News of the vintage of 1928 comes to you from a different source this issue, the result of a dark and dastardly plot perpetrated by two comely mistresses of intrigue, Gertrude Ward Barnum and Katy Lewis Lehman. They slipped something into my coffee one night and when I awakened the next morning, lo! I was Class Secretary.

First, let it be known that I, and I alone, am responsible for any remarks appearing in this department. Don't bring libel suits against the Alumni Association and seek to attach its bulging coffers. Sue me — I'm judgment proof. Sue and be — — — er darned!

Little Trudy, your ex-secretary mentioned above, has been busy managing a wedding. One of her brothers, I believe. You folks remember how numerous the Wards are around here. Just shake almost any bush, and plop, down comes a Ward!

Paul Hilliard, the "baritone halfback", accompanied by good wife Lucile, is resting up from last season's concert tours down on the farm in Illinois. The Hilliards included Orlando in their Florida itinerary last January.

Ralph Marlowe, agrarian specialist and authority on the home life of the aphids, is reported yet in Honolulu. If interested, write him for his Wauke-Wauke recipe, guaranteed to make you hula.

Red Winderveedle is well on his way toward his second million. Serving as City Attorney of Winter Park, having a large private law practice, an air-conditioned suite of offices, two new automobiles and a manor house, good old Red is undoubtedly the Horatio Alger boy of our class.

Sid Carlson is dunking in the political gravy train up in Tallahassee. He's something or other in the Industrial Commission.

Hugh Poole, utilities mogul down in Vero Beach, gets back to the campus infrequently. We see Grace Jacquith Geier and family occasionally, out in the orange groves of Windermere.

Mancel Lawrence is the mainstay of the Orlando Sentinel's advertising department. Mancel wears a halo these days, with a little cupid flitting around to keep it polished. And cupid finally caught him for on the 31st of August he and Miss Margaret Windau were married at St. Johns Church in Savannah, Georgia.

Frances Vallette is teaching music in the Elementary Schools and Junior High School in Nevada, Missouri. In addition to her work in the school Frances has a private class in piano. She still hopes to get back to the campus some of these days.

Glad Wilkinson spent her vacation down in Hendersonville, N. C. Glad is news editor of the Modern Beauty Shop magazine with publication offices in Chicago.

Cleland VanDresser is the publicity director of National Wildlife Federation with headquarters in Washington.

Isabel Green gives up teaching for a year to return to Rollins as House Mamma for the Pi Phis.

Port of Missing Men — and Women

If you know the whereabouts of anyone in this lineup, give us his or her address and we'll try to extract some news from them:

Howard Birchall, Jim Blevens, Rudolph Botts, Harry Bruns, Genevieve Carmichael, Willifred Carswell, Amanda Carter, Bertina Congdon, Vince Conway, F. H. Crowe, Charlotte Foster, Ray Fralick, Charlotte Grossman, Tom Haley, Treva Lou Blanton Hall, Bob Hill, John Hobart, Frances Williams Hosak, Fred Hughes.

Jack Joyner, Gerald Kearns, Warner King, Marie LaFleur, Martha Marlowe, DeWitt Merithew, Wendell Moore, C. H. Townsley and Wayne White.

Well, "thirty" for this issue. Send me some news — or you'll wish you had!
